A Woman Betrays Her Husband.

A wife's temper has let a murderer out of the bag in Bradford, Penn. In August last, John Blair sold out his property and announced his intention of going to Cincinnati. He built a raft and proposed to float down the Clarion river and then by the Ohio river to his destination. Before starting, he called upon his brother-in-law, John Early, and family and told them that if he got his float off he would not be back, but if he did not he would see them again. Ten days later Blair's brother and Early instituted a search for the missing man. They looked from the point at which he was to have started to the mouth of the Clarion river, but could find nothing of him. Subsequently the body was found at the mouth of Piney river. An inquest was held, and the body buried without exciting any attention. A few days ago a man and his wife, living at Clarion, engaged in a fierce quarrel and parted. He engaged a magistrate and swore that her husband killed John Blair. She said that her husband and Blair quarrelled over the ownership of some logs, and while words bitter and hot were poured out by both men, her husband pulled out a revolver and shot Blair dead. The assassin then proceeded to rob the dead man of his clothing, in which he arrayed himself. She says her husband confessed this to her when he came home in the evening. He also said if she breathed a word of the crime he would kill her as he had Blair.

A Patent Watch Dog.

A Meriden, Connecticut, man has invented a mechanical watch dog for the protection of buildings. A small lamp illuminates the eyes, and, by a simple arrangement, the tail pumps a quantity of compressed air into a cylinder, which is concealed in the body of the animal. This air escapes slowly through the dog's vicious looking teeth in such a manner that when the animal is placed on the front porch and duly "touched off" it grows all night in a most alarming manner. A Meriden boarding house keeper experimented with the inventor's model, and "set" the automatic guardian inside her front gate at the hour when churchyards yawn. The next day it was discovered that out of eighteen of her boarders who had latch keys, sixteen slept at a hotel that night, except one inebriated sixth-floorer, who indignantly smashed the model with a brick at about 4:30 A. M.

Making Work for Himself.

A traveling glazier has been arrested at Warrington, England, for stimulating the law of supply and demand. His method of creating trade was to throw a stone through the window in the evening and then appear in the morning to offer his services. But he overdid the business when he smashed seventeen panes of glass in the church, in one night, and came near hitting the landlord with the boulder thrown through a plate-glass window of the "Bull's Head Inn." He hailed from the Continent, and his low opinion of the English correctional system indicated by his conduct, was justified, for they failed to convict him, since no one saw him in the act of throwing the stone.

THE FERNICIOUS NORTH WIND.

The malignant influence of a north wind on temper and morals in Sacramento has long been proverbial in that city. Everybody there is sour and snappish when such a wind is blowing. It is not surprising, then, that during the recent north at Sacramento a number of fights and several shooting scrapes were reported.

One of the most serious of these climatic quarrels was that between Geo. Hamilton and his wife. He is a locomotive engineer, and leads, it appears, rather a fast life—off the road, that is. A girl named Nettie Winklerplek had been employed by Mrs. Hamilton to do domestic work, but had been discharged, either for inefficiency or for good looks. Nettie is a handsome and plump brunette of sixteen summers. Since the discharge of Miss Winklerplek, Mrs. Hamilton had all along suspected that her husband had been secretly visiting the girl, and was accordingly jealous.

Such was the state of things last Sunday when the wind came down from the north. It carried evil on its wings to the city of Sacramento. When Mrs. Hamilton felt its breath, she at once made up her mind that she would endure her husband's perfidy no longer. So she loaded up her little pistol and started out. To kill her husband! No. Mrs. Hamilton was a woman. The bullets were meant for the nasty little minx who had made the wife's home unhappy.

Now it happened that the angry lady was about to go forth on her vengeful mission, her husband came home. He had been out in the north wind some hours. So it is no wonder that the pair quarreled immediately. They wrangled for some time, and at last the wife dared her husband to go and confront with her the miserable minx aforesaid. This he agreed to do, and they went forth into the north wind together.

It may be rightly supposed that the wedded but inharmonious pair were far from being in an angelic frame of mind after a walk of half an hour in the teeth of that northern. Arrived at the domicile of the presumably wicked brunette, the two ladies engaged in an animated conversation on the stairs, to which the fickle husband was a sullen listener. The brunette denied the charges preferred by Mrs. Hamilton, and insisted that her relations with the latter's husband had been entirely innocent. "The wife was so much exasperated by these denials, by her rival's beauty, or by the north wind, that she drew her little pistol and fired three shots at the girl, who at the first intimation of danger, ran screaming to her room. The most wonderful thing in relation to the shots is that they all took effect.

Satisfied with her successful shooting, Mrs. Hamilton left the house to look for her husband. He, with a presence of mind that does him great credit, had taken to his heels at the first report of the pistol. But he promptly came forward and surrendered himself to her, when she called him. "Come on, George," she said, "let's go to the station house."

Two officers stepped forward at this juncture, and asked to be allowed to accompany the pair. So they all went along amicably together. On the way, Mrs. Hamilton expressed great satisfaction at the result of her interview with the brunette, appearing to entertain the heretical idea that a wife has the same right to avenge marital wrongs that a husband has. Mr. Hamilton thought his wife was talking too freely, and soothingly remarked to her: "My dear, you are nervous, and had better not talk." To which she sharply retorted: "I'm not half so nervous as you were when you ran at the sight of my pistol."

It was at first feared that Miss Winklerplek would die from her wounds, but she is now in a fair way to recover. Mrs. Hamilton has been refused bail. Whatever the result of the shooting, the trial of Mrs. Hamilton will be one of unusual interest. It will raise the moral question of a wife's right to revenge herself on the despoiler of her home, and also the legal question as to whether the north wind can be introduced in evidence before a court of law.

THE EXPRESSION OF LETTERS.

The Postal Commission, appointed to look into the matter, has reported that the carrying of letters by Wells, Fargo & Co. should be prohibited. The Commission could have not looked into it very deep. Wells, Fargo &

Co's letter service is very popular on his coast, and is a great convenience to the public. The Company has carried letters to remote mining camps where the Government had provided no mail service, and has earned a high reputation for the prompt dispatch and safe delivery of matter so forwarded. The Government receives the full amount of postage on all letters transmitted by express, and so long as the public choose to express letters and pay for the service, there seems no reason for interference with the business of the Company.

The Mexicans have a pleasant way of settling their differences with lasso, strangle, discussion, as it were. At Atoka, Indian Territory, the other day, two Mexicans fought a duel on horseback with lassos. They rode towards each other and when twenty feet apart the lassos were flung simultaneously. One man missed his aim, but his own neck was caught by his adversary's noose. Jerked from his horse with a violent shock, he died in an hour.

Our Wadsworth subscribers complain that the GAZETTE reached them one day late for four days in succession up to yesterday, owing to the packages being carried past Wadsworth four times on the postal car. Such miscarriages are very annoying, and we hope this thing may not happen again.

A French writer states that the large gold crosses now so much worn by English ladies are often hollow and frequently used to hold wine or spirits, for sipping in public places. When a lady presses one of these artful crosses to her lips, she may indeed be said to be taking spiritual consolation.

Says the Austin Reville: "E. Blennerhassett, of Washoe county, Geo. W. Cassidy, of the Eureka Sentinel, and McEwen, of the Virginia Chronicle, are mentioned as candidates for Congress from the Democratic side of the house."

E. Blennerhassett is of Lyon county, not of Washoe.

Mat-to-be, a full-blooded Modoc Indian, was found guilty of forging a check for $10 in New York last week. He had been employed in the city as a hostler. The Indian was sent to a reformatory. The child of the lava beds seems to have rapidly learned the ways of the pale-faces.

Trail of a Single Track Railroad. ANTIPOCH, March 16.—Between 400 and 500 people assembled here yesterday to witness the trial of the James single-track railway. The unanimous verdict of all present was that the exhibition was in every way satisfactory.

The farmers of Mussel Slough district estimate that $300,000 is annually paid to the Southern Pacific Railroad for freight, a sum sufficient to construct the James railroad to that section of Tulare county to Antioch. Immediate steps will be taken to organize a company and procure the right of way.

A Remarkable Cow. Dr. A. G. Cook, near Healdsburg, Cal., is the owner of a most remarkable cow. By actual test in seven days, she gave 188 quarts of milk, from which fourteen pounds and three ounces of butter were made. The Doctor offers to wager $100 that he can make 200 pounds of butter from the milk of that cow within the next 100 days.

A Duck in a Salmon's Belly. C. T. Thomas of Astoria captured a large salmon, and on opening it found a fine mallard duck. The Astorian, in reporting the matter, says: The explanation is that possibly the fish swallowed the duck accidentally, as it was diving, as it is the first instance recorded where anything has been found in the stomach of a salmon.

LEADVILLE.

The Best Admitted Mining Camp in The World.

The Eureka Sentinel publishes the following extract from a private letter written by an old resident of White Pine who is at present operating in Leadville:

It is hard to predict the future of this camp. There are vast quantities of ore in sight in the mines, yet they all think there are vast bodies underlying the ones they are now working. To me it looks doubtful, especially on Carbonate and Fryer Hills, where the principal mines now are. Higher up the hills I think they will find other contacts and pay mineral by sinking deeper than the ore bodies now discovered, for the front mines have a slight dip into the hills. If no other bodies of ore are found on Fryer and Carbonate Hills, it is only a matter of time for them to work out. But it will take some time to work out the ore now in sight. So that, with the new strikes that are certain to be made, will keep the excitement up the coming season. Of course the outside districts will help very much. There never was a mining camp so well advertised as this. I never saw property sell for quarter of the prices one can get here. Any hole that shows any pay ore will sell for from $50,000 to $150,000. Good paying mines that are shipping ore, with a good body in sight, sell from $250,000 up into the millions. Prospect stuff, without a color of mineral, sell for from $10,000 to $50,000, according to the locality, while some bring $100,000, without any pay-mineral in sight. It is the opinion of every one, or most of them, that all you have to do is to sink deep enough to find the mineral. The tender-feet got the best of this country, for old miners would not sink "blind," and thus they missed big fortunes by not doing it. It is a good deal like Chloride Flat. The mineral is found by sinking, without any surface indications. Any shaft or claim near one that has struck good ore, can be sold for a good price.
